The name of this course is Sexuality & Society. This course explores sociological research and theories of sexuality. The course investigates human sexuality as it is socially constructed by paying special attention to the processes by which cultural influences operate to define and reproduce crosscultural variation in sexual behavior. Topics include: anatomy and physiology, sexuality through the life course, variations in sexual behavior, birth control and theories of contraceptive use, sexually transmitted diseases, and sexual coercion. Other topics may be incorporated to reflect current research findings from the field.
