Passions for Teaching and Learning

What: Lunch with Dr. Huaqing Wang
When: February 18, 12:00 PM to – 1:00 PM
Where: Faculty Teaching and Learning Center, WSL Suite 102
RSVP: Chris Shiery at tlc@csub.edu or 654-2084 by February 14th

Please join us for lunch and a conversation on teaching and learning. Our guest will be Dr. Huaqing Wang, Millie Ablin Excellence in Teaching Award 2013-2014 winner. Everyone is welcome.

“Teaching and Learning is a process that passes knowledge from books to students. Experience has taught me that it takes more than the knowledge of teachers and books from a publisher. Passions from students and teachers are the most important. Passion for teaching enhances teachers in gaining new knowledge, caring more about their students and enjoying more the progress and success of their students. Passion for learning makes students eager to learn and drive them to work hard. I have learned that fundamental knowledge, high standards, large course projects, extra pushes and helps are needed for our students, and they will appreciate high standards and hard course projects (at least after they graduated).”

– Huaqing Wang